

Deedee joined Merck from Schnader Harrison Segal & Lewis in 2006 to assist with the Vioxx litigation in the United States. She managed the Vioxx personal injury settlement in the United States, and has managed NuvaRing, Januvia, and Implanon product litigation in the United States. In addition to her product litigation work, for the last several years, Deedee worked in the Program Management Office to support the Office of General Counsel and the Merck Legal Network in the United States. Deedee recently took on a new role managing Merck's international product liability litigation matters.

Deedee is a member of the Pennsylvania and Georgia bars, received her J.D. from Emory University, and her BA in Japanese from The Ohio State University.
