Bio Mary McClatchey

Mary McClatchey, Founder and President of WorkSmart Partners, has three decades of experience as a judge, civil rights attorney, workplace mediator, and organizational consultant and trainer. WorkSmart Partners is a workplace training and consulting company focusing on human resources, employer compliance, flexible work, and mental health programs.

Prior to launching her business, Mary was a Senior Administrative Law Judge for the Colorado State Personnel Board, where she decided and mediated federal and state employment and civil rights claims for 15 years. She previously served as General Counsel for the Colorado Civil Rights Commission and as a litigator in the Colorado Attorney General's Office, as an associate at Feiger, Collison & Killmer, and as a prosecutor in the Denver City Attorney's Office.

Mary cofounded the nonprofit, nonpartisan Women's Leadership Training Institute in Denver prior to law school. She has founded, built, and served on the board of directors of several community organizations.

Mary recently studied management and human capital analytics at the University of Colorado at Denver Graduate School of Business. She received her Bachelor of Arts Degree in English Literature from The Colorado College and her Juris Doctor from Northeastern University School of Law.
